Could my pet have heart disease without me knowing it? The answer is yes. A study at Virginia Tech Veterinary School found that 26% of cats that had no clinical signs of heart disease actually did. With a new test called Cardiac Pro BNP, we can screen for undetected heart disease.

With just a simple blood draw the Cardiopet proBNP Test can help us diagnose heart disease in canine and feline patients. This revolutionary new test also helps differentiate heart disease from heart failure, and respiratory disease from heart disease.

The Cardiopet proBNP Test provides quantitative results the next day, so we can rule out heart disease quickly and with confidence.

Call our office or e-mail us for details on how we can get your pet tested.

PET OF THE MONTH

Jacob Kellington was recently diagnosed with an inoperable growth, but that hasn't dimmed his vibrant personality.

He loves lounging on the porch absorbing sun rays for hours at a time. Shorter walks have become a necessity. Life is a little less hectic.

Jacob will receive a Free Frontline dose for the month of November. Be sure to register your pet on your next visit, or email a picture to the clinic.
